You are Invited to Hear

Guest Speaker:

Barry Kay, Professor and Political Consultant

"A Year of Elections: Implications from votes in Canada, the US and Israel"

Barry Kay was born in Toronto and came to Wilfrid Laurier University in 1978. Before coming to WLU, he taught at the University of Saskatchewan and the University of Windsor, and has also been a visiting professor at Tel Aviv University.

At Laurier, Barry has served in a number of administrative positions including department chairman, and has taught a range of courses, most recently in US Government, Canadian Public Policy and Electoral Behaviour. His academic research has focused upon public opinion and elections, and he has authored or co-authored over thirty articles in research journals, ten in the Canadian Journal of Political Science alone. He has been quoted widely in the popular press, appearing in virtually every significant media outlet in Canada as well as a number internationally.

Barry's columns have appeared in such newspapers as the Toronto Star and Ottawa Citizen and the Kitchener Record. He has also developed an electoral seat projection model which has been widely quoted in the media, and is accessible at the wlu.ca/lispop website. In recent elections he has served as a political consultant and election analyst for Global Television and CKCO-TV.

Barry received his Bachelor's degree from McMaster University, a Master's degree from the University of Pennsylvania, and his Ph. D. from the University of Rochester.
